“Noah’s Ark” by Salvador Dalí is a magnificent work of art, which highlights Dalí’s skill and religious influence. The large vessel depicted here is, in fact, Noah’s Ark, with its many levels and windows. It seems as this image takes place after the flood has ended. The ark is hoisted upon large boulders, signifying that it had been moved there by the flood’s forces. Bones are scattered across the ground, and the world feels desolate, aside from the ark. At the tip of the ark a man, presumably Noah, is extending his arms outwards to catch the incoming dove. Two beautiful rainbows are beaming through the sky onto the land. Framed, numbered 395/400.
